

MILWAUKEE.

For Many Years the Leading Western Point for the Storage of Cereals.

And To-Day the Greatest Wheat Depot in America.

Grain Statistics for the Year 1874, with Prominent Firms Engaged in the Traffic.

There are few cities in the country whose situation, history, and condition show a more favorable record and promise than Milwaukee. It is the advantage of having the best harbor on the west shore of Lake Michigan; its climate is unequalled, as is shown by its tables of mortality, which are lower than those of any city west of Buffalo. Around it are the finest wheat-growing lands in America; the merchants and business-men of that city vie in point of energy, activity, and solvent—with those of any city in this nation.

Following are brief notices of a few of the representative firms in two of the departments of commerce, the representative men of the locality who have contributed to the summation of last year's trade, as follows:

and influence, instead of simply and constantly following the market. Their ships include all varieties of grain, the same being bought in the home market on orders and shipped to the Eastern cities and seaboard and to intermediate points in England and the continent. The operations of the gentlemen composing the firm, Messrs. W. P. McLean and D. N. Hanson, who conduct the business from the home office in the Chamber of Commerce Building, in Chicago, Room 21.

CHARLES RAY & CO.—The firm of Charles Ray & Co., who, with those to whom they succeed, have been established in the trade since fifteen years, have no office at No. 8 on the floor of the Chamber of Commerce. This is one of the strongest and most conservative houses in the trade. Their business is composed almost entirely of receiving grain, dressed hogs, etc., from country buyers, and forwarding the same to the Eastern cities, and they, therefore, possess excellent facilities for judging of the crop movements and the harvest of the dealers in the Northwest since in vast estimation the firm has received more business than any other firm in the West. They have also received a large number of orders from the East as well as the West, and their connections extend over the entire Northwest and the principal cities in the West.

SHROEDER LINDELOM & CO.—The firm of Shroeder Lindelom & Co. is the best illustrated by the simple statement that they commenced business in March 1873, and today occupy the front rank among grain firms in the Great City. In addition to an extensive receiving business, they are also engaged in the forwarding of grain from the East as well as the West, and their connections extend over the entire Northwest and the principal cities in the West. They publish a weekly circular, replete with valuable information, and are generally commended by the press. Fred C. Shroeder and his associates are well known in the trade. They have had a long experience in the grain business, and stand high in social as well as in business circles. They are also engaged in the forwarding of grain from the East as well as the West, and their connections extend over the entire Northwest and the principal cities in the West.

L. H. LOWRY & CO.—The receiving office of L. H. Lowry & Co., having an office at No. 843 Broadway (Chamber of Commerce Building), Milwaukee, is one of the largest and most successful in the city. It was established in 1864, and, following an undeviating and careful line of management, they have gone on steadily increasing in property and in widening the bounds of their business. They are now engaged in the forwarding of grain from the East as well as the West, and their connections extend over the entire Northwest and the principal cities in the West.

BELL & MARTIN.—The extensive business of Bell & Martin originated many years ago as Messrs. Church & Bell, which, after sixteen years' continuance in trade, gave place to that of Messrs. Bell & Martin, and finally to the present firm. The business of this firm is composed of the forwarding of grain from the East as well as the West, and their connections extend over the entire Northwest and the principal cities in the West.

ZINKERSON, BARTLETT & CO.—Among the many concerns in Milwaukee which have been borne by the tide of grain to a point of successful prosperity, one of the prominent ones is that of Zinkerson, Bartlett & Co., a firm composed of clear-headed, experienced operators, and noted for its energy and fair dealing.

A. K. SHEPARD & CO.—General commission business received the reporter in their office, Nos. 18 and 19 Chamber of Commerce, at which point they have been located for almost one year. The members of the firm are Messrs. O. K. and G. W. Shepard and G. A. Leachman, the latter gentleman being a special partner. The senior member of the house has been engaged in the grain trade for about seventeen years, although it was about five years ago that he first became identified with Milwaukee dealers. This gentleman was the originator of the famous "central system" of grain movement, which has met with the most successful results throughout the country, but failed to gain operation through the estimate of ill-considered reformers who differed from it with other cities in its adoption. The firm are shippers and dealers for Eastern account, and each rank among the grain firms of the Northwest, and are deservedly popular with them.

GRAHAM HALDERMAN & CO.—The members of this thriving and well-known firm are Messrs. Will Graham, N. H. Halderman, and H. Halderman. All of these gentlemen have been identified with the grain trade in Chicago, as well as for shipment to other points. In the prosecution of this business they have been able to accumulate a large and reliable list of business correspondents, placing the concern in the position of being able to cope with the market.

W. P. McLEAN & CO.—One of the oldest and most highly-respected of the grain houses in the Western country is that of William P. McLean & Co., Milwaukee. The head office of the firm has been retained in that city, where the business was established some years ago, but the branch office in Chicago is now the principal one.

and North. Although the firm under its present title and designation has been doing business since the year 1873, it is generally admitted fact among dealers that during the past season the firm transacted the largest business in live-stock of any house in the city, and when it is known that their general grain trade is of equal importance, the extent of their operations may be adequately judged. And the enterprise of the gentlemen who conduct the business is not less commendable and credit can bring success.
